Inside The Numbers

Palomares took advantage of Sanchez being a slow starter by throwing 243 punches over the first two rounds. Sanchez threw 96. Though Sanchez's punches had more power on them than Palomares', Sanchez had a tough time finding room to land because Palomares crowded Sanchez and pecked away at him. A sustained body attack slowly turned the tide for Sanchez, though Palomares didn't relent. Sanchez broke through at the beginning of the eighth round, stunning Palomares and then knocking him out 53 seconds into the round.
