Inside The Numbers

Collazo landed what looked like in real time a cuffing right hook that knocked Vayson down in the waning seconds of the opening round. It turned out that the knockdown was caused by a forearm. Collazo seemed to be getting the better of Vayson in their early exchanges, when Vayson landed a body shot that hurt Collazo and changed the complexion of the fight in the fourth round. Collazo responded by out-landing Vayson 48-27 over the fifth and sixth rounds. Vayson was still engaging and landing hard shots in the seventh round when Vayson's corner threw the towel in at 1:41 of the seventh round. It was one of the more perplexing stoppages in recent memory because Vayson was still competing in what felt like a close fight, even though the tide was turning in Collazo's favor.
