Inside The Numbers

Both fighters found their range in the opening frame, setting a blistering pace in terms of punches thrown. As the fight wore on, O'Doherty's jab was the difference maker. He threw 235 more jabs and landed 77 more than Glackin, and as a result, constantly found himself within punching range of Glackin. As the fight progressed, Glackin had less and less success keeping O'Doherty off of him. The ninth and tenth rounds were particularly lopsided, as O'Doherty held a 44-13 advantage in punches landed. Having seen their fighter absorb enough punishment, Glackin's corner threw in the towel at 2:33 of the tenth round.
