Inside The Numbers

Returning from a 15-month absence as well as back surgery, Bivol retained his WBA/IBF light heavyweight titles in shutout fashion on the scorecards thanks to his supreme ring generalship and historically airtight defense. In fact, Eifert landed only 12 total punches in the match, the lowest total ever recorded in a 12-round bout of any kind in CompuBox history. He failed to land a single punch in six of the 12 rounds and never landed more than three in any round (rounds two and three). Meanwhile, Bivol scored the fight's only knockdown with a counter hook to the chin midway through round one and dictated distance and pace throughout as he averaged 59.2 punches per round compared to Eifert's 29.1. While Bivol wasn't offensively sharp (15% overall, 11% jabs, 27% power), his defensive reflexes and timing were masterful as he yielded 3% overall, 2% jabs and 6% power. Bivol ended the match ahead 105-12 overall, 60-6 jabs, 26-4 body and 45-6 power and jabs comprised 76.2% of his total output. Scoring: 120-107 (3x).
